AIDS is not over

Take a moment to consider:

- Every 13 minutes, someone in the United States is infected with HIV.
- More than 250,000 people don't know they are infected.
- More than half of the more than one million people living with HIV/AIDS are not in medical care.
- Stigma and discrimination in some cultural and racial groups keep many from getting tested or seeking care.

Clearly, AIDS is a global concern.

AIDS is in everyone's community, so it must be dealt with locally. For the last 23 years, Desert AIDS Project (D.A.P.) has been doing just that.

D.A.P. offers primary medical care through its Wells Fargo HIV Health Center and widespread education and prevention services for schools, civic organizations, businesses, churches, and health organizations throughout the communities it serves. Anonymous HIV testing is also provided.

Ensure your financial future while helping Desert AIDS Project.

Your planned giving decision will greatly benefit the mission of Desert AIDS Project by helping us meet the evolving needs of our client base. But your planned gift can also be a smart way for you to create financial benefits during your lifetime. Depending on how you choose to create your plan, your decision might also have long-lasting benefit for any heirs you might leave behind.

We'll help you every step of the way.

Some potential donors think planned giving is only for the very wealthy. But more and more donors at all income levels are discovering that they can support D.A.P. in a significant way. There is a unique set of circumstances behind each and every planned gift. Our donor stories illustrate how D.A.P. can help you while you help us.

After you've explored the links to the right, you will probably want to consult with any financial advisors you have before making a planned giving decision. We invite you or your advisors to contact us with your thoughts for how you can help to support the ongoing work of Desert AIDS Project.
